"In addition to that loss which I sustain in common with all who lived under the Government of a most benevolent and gracious King, I have to lament the death of a beloved and affectionate brother with whom I have lived, from my earliest years, in terms of the most cordial and uninterrupted friendship, and to whose favour and kindness I have been most deeply indebted.

"After having passed my life in the service of my country, and having, I trust, uniformly acted as the most faithful subject and servant of the King, I am now called upon, under the dispensation of Almighty God, to administer the Government of this great empire.—I am fully sensible of the difficulties which I have to encounter; but I possess the advantage of having witnessed the conduct of my revered father, and my lamented and beloved brother; and I rely with confidence upon the advice and assistance of Parliament, and upon their zealous co-operation in my anxious endeavors, under the blessing of Divine Providence, to retain the Reformed Religion established by law, to protect the rights and liberties, and to promote the prosperity and happiness of all classes of my people."

Whereupon the Lords of the Council made it their humble request to his Majesty that his Majesty's most gracious declaration to their Lordship might be made public, which his Majesty was pleased to order accordigly.

JAMES BULLER.

MALTA, June 2.

The following instance of the most barbarous outrage committed by the people of the territories of the Dey of Algiers on the crews of two unfortunate ships of the French navy, has been communicated to us through Capt. Hastings, of H. M. brig Ferret, who arrived here from thence, on the 29th ult.

"On the 20th Capt. Hastings arrived at Algiers with letters from the Vice Admiral, Sir Pulteney Malcolm to the French commander blockading the port. It seems that a French brig, with despatches from Toulon, had fallen in with another brig of the blockading squadron, which offered to conduct her to their commodore; but in consequence of the thick foggy weather, they both run on shore on the 17th, and the French commander knew not what was the fate of their crews, when Capt. Hastings arrived. Permission was, therefore granted to the Ferret to enter the port; and Capt Hastings had the horror of learning on his arrival at the palace of the British Consul, that 110 [illegible] of his Most Christian Majesty's sailors had been brought to the Dey's palace, and [illegible] the senior captain and 8 men were [illegible] had been brought into the town alive. Notwithstanding this dreadful slaughter, no less than 70 men were missing, who it is supposed, have been massacred, as a reward of 200 dollars is offered for the head of a Frenchman. [illegible] information was obtained on the spot from the foreign consuls resident in Algiers, some of whom had seen the French [illegible] led up this barbarous [illegible] taken with the contemplation of [illegible] recital and miserable [illegible] to make the blood thrill [illegible]

Behold an animal entirely naked, whom nature has abandoned to the fatalities of the elements, and to whom she has not allotted any one particular climate, wherein to live; she has balanced him on two feet, and made him so feeble that he requires to be instructed to walk and even to eat; the animal to whom is denied the instinct of knowing the vegetables proper for his subsistence. In his breast she has planted all the blind passions, without enlightening his mind with one of their motives; who cannot satisfy his most common wants, without the assistance of others who is yet, without ceasing, at war with his species—who persecutes them, and is persecuted by them—who massacres, and is massacred—who becomes to himself the most dangerous of enemies—often dies of melancholy, and sometimes destroys himself in despair. This miserable animal is man. On the other side—Behold a being, whom nature has made for the enjoyment of relationship with all his kind upon earth, and to whom she has confided the use of fire, the first prime mover of the universe. He breathes in all climates—navigates every sea—inhabits all parts of the globe; turns to his use all vegi-

TOWN OF AUSTIN.

SATURDAY.... OCTOBER 2,....1830.

☞ The intention of Governments in civilized countries, and among civilians, is the well-being, and prosperity of every individual; and the promotion of good order and morals among mankind. It is therefore the expectation of every citizen, in a representative government like our own, where the people through their representatives, establish the regulations, make the laws, and choose those who legislate, and those who administer them, that each and every individual, will appreciate their importance, as not only to be obedient to, but aid in the prompt execution of them. It would be a species of presumption, to inform any sensible and well disposed person, that by strictly adhering to, and promoting the regular administration of justice; he at the same time, aids and assists in establishing his own prosperity, safety and happiness. A few days since, we had the satisfaction, to recognize a disposition in the civil authority, to preserve peace and order, in the prompt and vigilant execution of the laws and municipal ordinances. Several persons were arraigned before the Alcalde of this Jurisdiction, for having committed a breach of the ordinance for the suppression of gambling, and which had been, but recently promulgated, and each of the delinquents were fined in the sum of fifty dollars, being the least penalty attached to a breach of said ordinance. This proceeding, thoroughly convinces the potent arm with which, the judiciary authorities, are willing to wield the sword of justice, for the promotion of morals and suppression of vice.—We would add however, that, notwithstanding our most cordial approbation of the proceedings in the case alluded to, in consequence of the recent publication of the ordinance, and their evident ignorance of its existence, at the time of its infringement, should they petition for relief, (although we are no advocates for precedents of this kind,) the Ayuntamiento, will doubtless extend its magnanimity and lenity towards them, for their first transgression.

DEATH OF THE KING OF ENGLAND.

[illegible] we [illegible] we [illegible] we [illegible] following [illegible] news:

[illegible]

IMPORTANT FROM ENGLAND.

[illegible]

A bulletin, of which the following is a copy, has been [illegible] received at Secretary Sir Robert Peel, one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State

"Windsor Castle, Jan. [illegible] Almighty God to take from this world, the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

"His Majesty expired at a quarter past 3 o'clock this morning without pain.

(Signed) "H. HALFORD.
"J. TIERNEY"

In the course of Friday evening, before 9 o'clock, the physicians intimated to their royal patient the probability to give him further relief, and their opinion that his last moments were rapidly approaching. To this communication he calmly replied, "God's will be done" and in a few moments after, he asked, "Where is Charlotte?" The Bishop of Chichester was immediately summoned to the royal bedside, and at his hands the dying sovereign received the sacrament. During the administration of the rite his Majesty was much less troubled by the cough than he had been previously, and afterwards it gradually subsided, and towards midnight he sunk into a state of apparently quiet repose, which continued until about 3 o'clock, when he became rather restless, and feebly expressed a wish to have his head placed in a more elevated position. Previous to all this, all the attendants had retired, except Sir Matthew Tierney and Sir Wathen Waller, and they instantly attempted to afford his Majesty the [illegible] had requested; but they had scarcely commenced the attempt when his Majesty suddenly motioned them to desist, and placing both his hands upon his breast, he ejaculated, "Oh! this is not right! this is death!—Oh, God! I am dying!" These were the last and the only distinct words he uttered, after having received the holy sacrament; and from this time his dissolution came on so quietly and so gradually that the physicians had some difficulty in ascertaining precisely at what moment he ceased to exist. In the mean time the Bishop of Chichester, and all the principal members of the royal household, with the pages in immediate attendance, were called in, and in their presence, without the slightest indication of suffering, his Majesty calmly expired. The principal persons present, were the Bishops Chichester, the physicians, the Marquis Conyngham, Sir Andrew Barnard, Sir Wm. Knighton, Sir William Fagdeon, Sir Wathen Waller, Lord Strathven and Colonel [illegible] and when the physicians had [illegible] his Majesty had ceased to exist, they retired leaving the pages in attendance to perform the necessary attentions to the royal corpse, under the superintendence of the physicians.

THE ACCESSION OF WILLIAM IV.

His Majesty William IV. arrived at St. James's [illegible] a few moments before twelve o'clock on Saturday, and appeared to be in excellent health. The King entered the State-room, in which the Privy Council [illegible] about one o'clock. His Majesty was [illegible] in an Admiral's uniform and took his [illegible] at the throne. The whole of the Members of the late King's Privy Council, who had arrived at the Palace, were assembled in the apartment.—His Majesty read the following declaration, viz.

CARTHAGENA.

New York, July 26.—We are informed by Capt. Hoffman of the brig Alcibiades, which arrived this morning from Carthagena, that he sailed on the 20th; that two days previous despatches had been received from Bolivar, announcing a counter revolution in that department, which had declared in favor of union with New Granada. General Mires had been compelled to resign. Bolivar was still at Carthagena.

In addition to the foregoing, we learn, through the politeness of S. E. Burroughs, Esq. that Capt. Hoffman announced his departure for a port in the Mediterranean at the solicitations of all classes of the inhabitants, gentlemen of the first distinction in the civil and military body, requesting that he would take them, and on the following day the principal citizens of Carthagena sought him on board for the same purpose. two thousand men were taken on the day of battle; thus the army is certain not to be in want, at least for eight or ten days.

Whilst the action was engaged, the west erly winds which had kept out the squadron which left the bay of Palma on the 16th, were to blow. An easterly breeze drove it towards the coast, which it reached last night. As to the details connected It took place without obstacle since the 14th communications have been perfectly free between the army and the fleet, they were not such as to afford them the violent storm, which I have already given an account. To-day the cannonading has continued.—The Arabs prosecute themselves in great numbers. The Arabs were much more scattered than on the preceding days. Their object appears to be less to fight than to attack straggling men and pillage them.

Arrangements are made to attack the enemy to-morrow at day break.

Order date of the 26th June, Admiral Duperre, writes from Sidi Farruch, that various engagements took place with the enemy on the 24th and 25th of June.

The Florence Gazette contains the following extract of a letter of June 1, from Tubarca, a small island on the coast of Africa, between Tunis and Algiers—The Moorish population have not shown a decided disposition to defend Algiers; but, on the contrary, it is asserted that they have collected in the villages and in the fields a vast number of cattle, and great quantities of provision, in the hope of selling them at a good profit to the French army.

The Augsburgh Gazette gives the following under date of Ancona, June 19th:—"Commercial letters from Corfu speak of fresh disturbances having broken out in Greece and assert that the Government is making preparations to support with vigour the insurgents of Candia, and aid them to drive the Turks out of the island.

The Constitutionel of this morning has the following:—"It is said to have been decided at a late Council of Ministers, that, immediately upon the capture of Algiers, Gen. de Bourmont is to be recalled to Paris, to be present at the opening of the Chambers, and that Marshall the Duke de Ragusa will take the command of the army in Africa." The Journal du Commerce gives the following version to this rumour:—"Gen. From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Among the steerage passengers of Francois 1er on her last passage, there was an old weather beaten grenadier of the Imperial Guard, with the decoration of the Legion of honor in his button hole, one of the 1400 who 16 years ago followed Napoleon into the Island of Elba. The French police however, knew him, little thanks for it, and the poor fellow was so vexed and harrassed, that in order to escape starving he resolved upon leaving his own country, he did so; and embarked with his family on the 2d June in the Francois 1er. The old man's intrepid a lively interest among the cabin passengers, and they among other things advised him to address himself to Joseph Bonaparte, which purpose they drew up for him a [illegible] Provided with this and his military [illegible], the old man repaired to seek [illegible] Count Survilliers. POETRY.

[illegible]

Come, when the proud, declining sun
Wraps in a cloud drapery round his form,
When the wide Earth he looks upon,
Seems radiant in his boundless glow:—
When birds are closing,—and the haze
Comes o'er the far blue mountain's head:
When sunset's fire and kindly blaze
Are painted on Day's dream-bed!

In Autumn's hour—in Winter's scene,
When pale pure hills in glory rise;
When forests, stript of Summer's sheen
Stand naked 'neath the bitter skies:—
In the deep terrors of the storm—
The tempest's mighty thundering,—
As death's dark angel rears his form,
And veils the wide Earth with his wings!

Ready ye of these!—and in belief
Will like a shadow disappear—
Like a wild night-bird's flight of grief,
From the impillared atmosphere.
A light, like Summer's radiant morn,
Will on the enrapture'd soul break in:—
And glorious visions will be born,
Unstained by earthliness or sin!

Oh, who can cast his glance abroad,—
Up to the chambers of the sky—
Nor feel the presence of his God,—
The awful searchings of his eye!
Even the sad changes of our way,
Are leaves of a great volume given:—
They bear the records of Decay,
And bid us seek repose in Heaven?

☞ We take the liberty to present today to our readers, the following solemn and impressive Sentence, pronounced by the Hon. Richard T. Barker, Judge of the Supreme Court of Jefferson County, Maryland, on Ebenezer Cox, for the murder of Colonel Thomas B. Allen, superintendent of the United States Armory, at Harper's Ferry.

SENTENCE.

Ebenezer Cox:

I am about to perform a very painful duty, rendered less so by the absolute certainty of your guilt. I contemplate the guilty conduct of one so young, and in some respects, (if not, notwithstanding the proofs,) so favorable circumstances of your own making; and if I advert to the circumstances of your case, in terms of severe reprobation, it is to vindicate the just authority of the law, and not from any feeling of unkindness towards you. The gangrene of guilt, in persons of your age, is not to be excised by the knife of justice, but by the mild remedies of reason and religion. Ah, [illegible] your country, has said, and [illegible] that you are guilty of MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE. The verdict does not [illegible] independent of your [illegible] and when solemnly [illegible] an instance of [illegible] all its circumstances [illegible] without a parallel. It stands [illegible] dismissal from employment at Harpert-Ferry, [illegible] of the amiable and unfortunate [illegible] applied to him to be [illegible] which for sufficient reasons was [illegible] for this provocation alone, you [illegible] as you allege, with others [illegible] coolly determined to [illegible] by taking his life—that having [illegible] you went to his house, [illegible] presence of children, [illegible] and upon his calling [illegible] you shot him down for you, you instantly and barbarously, in the hearing and almost presence of his family, shot him through the body, before he had full time to rise from the chair in which he was seated, or opportunity to make even one appeal to heaven for mercy. This is a summary of your own free, and I fear unconcerned disclosures, corroborated (except as to the alleged conspiracy,) by the testimony of numerous witnesses; and it proves that your crime had all the ingredients MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE. It was wilful, deliberate, premeditated killing, under as slight a provocation as ever instigated human being to a similar outrage; and the act was as daring and desperate, as it was malicious.

To such an act, so [illegible] stated, the law affixes the penalty of DEATH in its most ignominous form. "He who (maliciously) sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." This is the sentiment of all nations, civilized and savage—a sentiment produced by necessity, approved by Reason, and sanctioned by the voice of Heaven itself.

Your days are therefore numbered, and you must prepare to die. Study, the forms of the law have been scrupulously respected, and you have had upon your trial every advantage its humanity grants: since your guilt has been rendered manifest by unexceptionable testimony, acknowledged by yourself, and declared by the unanimous voice of twelve jurors free from all objections you have nothing more to expect or to hope from MAN. If pardon is to be obtained for such a crime as you have perpetrated it must from any earthly tribunal you must seek it. Whether by prayer and repentance, you may obtain it elsewhere, and thus avert the more damning consequences of guilt, is not given to us to know. Our dim views extend not beyond the grave, except that we are assured, the mercy of GOD is infinite. But in reference to that awful hour, would I hope to make [illegible] impression upon one who had [illegible] existence [illegible] so little sensibility, I would advise, entreat, nay I [illegible] you, by every affecting consideration, to employ the few days which remain to you in this world, in making serious preparation for another. It is awful to think that you, [illegible] are now standing before a living man, in the pride of youth, the glow of health, and enjoying the full enjoyment of animated existence, [illegible] in short and certain a period soon to [illegible] but it is still more awful, to reflect upon your [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] Mr Turner [illegible] Minister, [illegible] British Minister and his Secretary [illegible] among them exile[illegible]. We publish this as we received it—[illegible] for the honor of humanity it is not [illegible] Mr Turner had an interview on the [illegible] with President Mosquera. We shall [illegible] whether he has sufficient power to protect them.

A revolution is preparing by the Junta to upset Mosquera and appoint Col. Gaitan Vargas and other patriots of the 26th Sept. as Ministers.

In my last I told you the Provinces of Socorro, Tiron and Cucuta, were in rebellion, Lopez and another individual have excited the Province of Neiva against the government. Guayaquil has followed the example of Quito. The reaction in Venezuela continues.

The Liberator is quite well: augmenting his popularity daily, by the retired and simple life he is leading in his little cottage situated about a quarter of a mile from this city. He will not remove from here at present.

NAVAL REMINISCENCE.

About a year previous to the declaration of war against Great Britain, the English frigate Macedonian arrived at Norfolk, where her commander Captain Carden, and his officers were treated with all the hospitality for which the citizens of that city are distinguished. The frigate United States was then lying there, under the command of Commodore Decatur, between whom and Captain Carden the customary civilities passed. At a dinner given to Captain Carden, on board the United States, the comparative merits of the two vessels became the theme of remark, in which Captain Carden maintained with some warmth the superiority of his own new and beautiful ship. Decatur with great delicacy, replied that he should sincerely regret the contingency which would place them in an attitude of mutual hostility, and waved the subject.—Little did the gallant captain of the Macedonian then dream that the short space of a year and a half would prove to his mortification the fallacy of his opinion, but so it was. After the return of the Macedonian to England, and the subsequent declaration of war, she sailed to join the squadron on our coast, after touching at one of the western islands, a vessel was descried, which not answering the signals of the day, was known to be either a French or American frigate.—The greatest enthusiasm prevaded the whole ship, and Captain Carden exultingly exclaimed to one of his officers, "if she be a French frigate we will give her 25 minutes, if a Yankee, we will take her in 20 minutes."—The engagement commenced, but the Macedonian having the wind, was enabled to choose her own distance, in consequence of which the United States could not bring her to close action, until the lapse of more than an hour. * * * * When the British flag was lowered, the frigate was hailed from United States "what ship is that?" The answer came back, "His Brittanic Majesty's frigate Macedonian, J. S. Carden, commander," on hearing which, Decatur, in a hurried manner, and with a quivering voice, produced by a momentary gush of feeling, directed the officer with the trumpet to ask if Capt. Carden was well. He was answered in the affirmative, and in a few minutes Captain Carden was on the deck of the United States, looking anxiously around for the person of his friend Decatur. The commodore being dressed in a short roundabout, with a tarpaulin hat, and his face disguised and blackened by powder and smoke, at first not until he advanced towards Capt. Carden with his hand extended, that the captain could distinguish him from among the multitude of discolored visages that surrounded him. [illegible] returned to England, was honorably acquitted of all blame by a court of inquiry, and died in about a year afterwards.—Journal of Commerce.

An original Toast.—The following was given by A. C. Ainsworth of Rhode Island, at the late anniversary.

"The wretch who would refuse to defend the liberties of his country—shod with leather, may he be condemned, by the voice of a free people to wander over a desert of gunpowder."

Peter Vanteroom, a citizen of the Netherlands, died lately there in his 121st year, and in Poland an old maid died last year in her 124th year—both enjoying excellent health and spirits up to the last day previous to their death.

Illustrious Ayuntamiento,

The electoral assembly of the department of Bexar, have elected me a member of the legislature of this State, and as such I have the honor to present myself to you for the purpose of receiving your instructions.

In the discharge of the obligations of the representative of a free people, various and very important duties present themselves. Among these, the first in order is to obtain by the most secure and certain means, an exact knowledge of the wants of the people; the reforms in the laws which experience may have demonstrated to be necessary, and the general will of the people as to [illegible] in order that the representative may be furnished with the necessary data, to discharge with more accuracy his duties in the legislative hall during the period of the session.

Under this view of the subject, I have considered it to be my first duty to assure the people of this municipality through its Ayuntamiento that in my character of representative, I consider myself to be the agent and servant of the people, and as such bound to obey their will, so far as may be consistent with the constitution, and with the basis of the federal system by which we are governed, and which we have all sworn to support. I have therefore to request, that [illegible] the organ of the people of this municipality you will be pleased to furnish me with such information, or indications on the subject, as you may deem proper and necessary.

Various persons have suggested that some reform is necessary in the mode of administrating justice in the inferior courts, and many appear to be in favor of the establishments of juzcados de letras, judges, &c. which, [illegible] in conformity with the 122d and 123d [illegible] of the state constitution. For the reasons and also for the reason that these are points of great importance, I hope you will permit me to call your attention to them particularly, and that you will express such opinions relative to them as you may deem proper, for my government in them, as also in any other matters which in your judgment require legislative interposition, to promote the prosperity and general advancement of the department and of the state.

I embrace this opportunity to present to you the assurances of my high consider[illegible]

NEWS OF AUSTIN.

[illegible] SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1830

We have received regular files of the [illegible] Oficial, up to the 31st of September. [illegible] general aspect of political affairs in Mexico, is favorable, and is evidently improving daily. The Guerrero party, as a party, seems to have ceased to exist. In the direction of Acapulco, there is still some obstruction, but that section of the country appears to be suffering severely from the robberies of detached and irregular bands.

The correct and steady course of the present administration, and its adherence to the constitution, has not only disarmed those who were at first disposed to view it with jealousy; but it has rallied around it the best talents, and the best men of the Nation.

A number of amendments to the national constitution, have been proposed by some of the states.—Among the most important, is that of New Leon, which has for its object a property qualification, to entitle persons to vote. Should that amendment pass, it cannot fail to place the political institutions of the country, on a more solid and permanent basis than they at present rest on.

It is to be regretted that nothing very favorable can be said as to the state of things in Saltillo, the capital of our State.—In our next we will endeavor to lay before our readers such official information on that subject as has been received at this office.

☞ We have been furnished with the following extract, from the order of His Excellency General Teran, to Mr. George Fisher, dated the 24th of May last, suspending the establishment of the [illegible] house of Stephen [illegible]

Extract.

[illegible]

The Ayuntamiento [illegible] were without a Secretary, and [illegible] Spanish and English language, [illegible] impossible for Mr. S. M. Williams, who had acted as Secretary, to continue in that office, owing to his other occupations, and Mr Fisher was provisionally appointed from necessity.—There was no other person to be had at the time, who possessed the requisite knowledge of the two languages.

The Ayuntamiento has dismissed the said Fisher, from the office of Secretary, for reasons which are stated in the document on that subject, which we publish in this day's paper.—The discoveries subsequently made, as to the character of said Fisher, and which are stated in the document on that subject, which we also publish in this day's paper, speak for themselves, and do not require comment.

These transactions will, no doubt, afford a salutary caution to the local authorities, and to the people of this Colony, against future adventurers who may attempt to impose upon their generous and unsuspecting disposition.—While the inhabitants of this colony were in the wilderness, destitute of resources, and almost of hope, no one envied their situation. The scene is now somewhat different, and speculators and adventurers, who are prowling and preying upon every inhabited spot on the globe, will not let them pass unnoticed.

In the town of San Felipe de Austin, on this 5th October 1830, at 5 o'clock P. M. the Ayuntamiento in session this day without the presence of the secretary pro tem. George Fisher: Present, Thomas Barnett President, James H. Cartwright 1st Regidor, Walter C. White 2d Regidor, and Wm. Pettus standing Procurador; without the presence of the 1st. and 3d Regidors being absent. It was [illegible]

In the town of San Felipe de Austin, on the 5th October 1830.—The members of the Ayuntamiento, consisting of Thomas Barnett, president; Walter C. White, 2d Regidor, and William Pettus, standing procurador, having on this day, been requested by the president to meet, as no more of the members are present, and do not live in town; the president stated —that difficulties [illegible] in the conduct of George Fisher, the former secretary pro tem. of the Ayuntamiento, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] have all been [illegible] and it is [illegible] Have [illegible] complied with, & at the same time [illegible] the [illegible] which [illegible] illustrious Ayuntamiento [illegible] the honorable [illegible] to [illegible] to be [illegible]

[illegible] may be [illegible] they [illegible] and [illegible] would be culpable.

But not [illegible] the [illegible] nor in the [illegible] and deputies have in any manner attempted the constitution, nor committed any other act whatever, under any laws known to the code of this state, as in force, would render them liable to be arrested in the manner indicated. On the contrary, it appears that their only crime [illegible] voted for a senator as they deemed [illegible] and with the proper independence, and in the manner, and with all the formalities prescribed by the constitution. To punish them, therefore, for this act, would be punishing them for having done that, which it was their most solemn duty to do. It is not, and cannot be made a question whether the senator is good or bad. The question is, whether he was elected in the manner prescribed by the constitution, and whether he possess the constitutional qualifications.

It is said that these deputies have not merited and do not merit the public confidence. That is a question for the constituents of said deputies. If in the opinion of their constituents they do not merit confidence, they ought not to be re-elected. This is the remedy which the constitution prescribes in such cases, and to make it more effectual, the people must be resorted to, every two years. This is the only competent tribunal to decide the question: the tribunal of the people convened at the elections, at the times, places, mode, and with the formalities and decorum prescribed by the constitution.

It is due to justice and to frankness to say, that this Ayuntamiento has seen with disapprobation the charges which you have been pleased to make against the said deputies, and particularly against those of Texas, citizens Jose Maria Balmaceda and Rafael Manchola, and this corporation cannot consider the attempt to expel them in the manner indicated, in any other light, than as an attack upon the constitution, and a direct insult to the constituents of said deputies.

The deputies Balmaceda and Manchola, have merited and do merit the confidence of the people of this municipality in the stations they occupy, and neither this corporation, nor the people of this municipality have seen any evidence relative to the conduct of the deputies Sanderin and Arragan, that they have forfeited the public confidence, in the stations they occupy.

Consequently, whilst this Ayuntamiento receives your aforementioned communication and the accompanying documents, in the same spirit of confidence and harmony which animates that illustrious corporation, and which certainly ought to exist between all the Ayuntamientos of the state: it hastens to assert, that the execution of that sacred duty imposed by the constitution and laws, reverts to the legal representatives of the people, if the acts and conduct of that corporation, and of the representation which, in consequence thereof, you made to the honorable legislature of the state.

This corporation embraces the opportunity to present to you the assurances of its high consideration and respect.—God and the Constitution.—Town of Austin, 27th September, 1830.

By order of the Ayuntamiento,
THOMAS BARNETT, President.
To the Illustrious Ayuntamiento of Leona Vicatio (formerly Saltillo.)

[illegible] Bills, [illegible] and the regulation presented to the legislature, by the Ayuntamiento of that city, on the first of [illegible] demanded [illegible] and [illegible] them in mass by [illegible] from the 7th Art. of the Plan [illegible] was acted on by the legislature, [illegible] referred to a committee, who reported on [illegible] 5th September, in favor of expelling [illegible] and members, Balmaceda and Sandeen. This report was adopted by the legislature, and decree was passed on the 18th, when the said two members. This decree was presented to Governor Viesca, who [illegible] from the 27th without his approval, on the ground that it was unconstitutional. It was again referred by the legislature to the committee, who on the 28th, again reported in favor of its adoption, and on the 29th it was again approved by eight votes, being the whole number of members present, and ordered to be published as a law, having been passed by a majority of the members present, as the 103d Art. of the constitution provides.

Another decree was passed by the same majority of eight, refusing to receive Gov. Viesca's resignation, which he had tendered, but granting him permission to retire for the benefit of his health. The same decree promotes the Vice-Governor, Victor Blanco, from exercising the executive office, and appoints the President of the supreme court governor pro tem. who entered upon his new office on the 30th September.

The four members whose expulsion was in question (including the two Texas members) did not attend the sessions when these subjects were before the house, for the reason that they would not sanction such unconstitutional acts, even by their presence.

The 6th clause of 90th article of the constitution gives power to the legislature "to form itself into a grand jury for the purpose of declaring whether or not there is cause of accusation for offences in office, or common offences, against any of the members of the legislature, the Governor, the Vice-Governor, the members of the council, the secretary of state, &c. &c.

The 197th article says, "the trials on accusations, made for offences in office against the inferior judges, and also those of the same class, or for common offences, that are made against the members of the legislature, the Governor and Vice-Governor, councillors, secretary of state, &c. "shall have their beginning and termination through all their stages in the supreme court of the state."

The 117th article says that in default of the Governor, the Vice-Governor shall exercise the functions of governor, &c. &c.

The 118th article says, that in default of the Vice-Governor also, one of the members of the council of state, shall be chosen by the legislature, to fill the office of Governor, &c. &c.

The supreme court of the state is composed of three judges.—One of them Manuel Carrillo, was elected senator on the 1st of September. Another Rafael Manchola, was made governor, pro tem. by the legislature on the 30th September. It appears that the secretary general, has also resigned, so that it seems the supreme court is totally disorganized and the administration of justice by that tribunal suspended for the present.

TRANSLATION,

Of a letter addressed to the Ayuntamiento of this jurisdiction, by the chief of department, calling on the inhabitants of the Jurisdiction, to volunteer in an expedition against the Tahuacana Indians.

"War having being declared against the Tahuacana Indians for the various assassinations and frequent robberies of cavallades which they have committed, after every exertion dictated by compassion has been used, to procure their friendship by costly presents. The commanding military commandant, of this department has manifested to me the urgent necessity for a new expedition against these feeble enemies, to correct their audacity or exterminate them: in order by this means, to preserve the wives and property of the inhabitants of the different towns who, for so long a time, have suffered from the depredations. In order [illegible] the commandant relies on the influence [illegible] department and the co-operation of the inhabitants under its government, for which reason I make it known to you, in order that you should invite the inhabitants of your municipality to volunteer, and number themselves and country this important service, as I am well persuaded that in this manner they will secure that tranquility and happiness, and that of future generations. Hoping you will be pleased to communicate to me as soon as possible, the result of the measure, to enable me to regulate with the commandant the sanction, so as to such a manner as shall secure the good result which we desire and promise ourselves with. God and liberty. Bexar, 14th October, 1830.

RAMON MUSQUIZ.

To the Ayuntamiento of Austin.

In communicating the above letter to the inhabitants of this municipality, the Ayuntamiento flatters itself with the hope that sufficient number will be found anxious and ready to cooperate with the inhabitants of the department, in so desirable and laudable a wish, as that of punishing those insolent and thievish Indians.
